

The Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) requires schools to provide accessible instructional materials (AIM) to students who are blind/low vision, have a physical limitation or have a diagnosed print disability. As part of Blackford County Schools' mission to provide quality education to all students, we are providing parents, students, and staff with websites that will further explain what AIM is and how it can benefit students.

There are many helpful sections on the ICAM website. Please make sure to click on the Students/Family tab and read more about what resources are available for families. There is also a glossary section to help you understand terms that may be new to you.

The PATINS website also has a page for family resources under the resources tab that is helpful for parents looking for further information.
