Staff Use of Physical Restraint and/or Seclusion

The use of physical restraint and/or seclusion of students by school personnel should be used only as a last resort to maintain safety in emergency situations when there is substantial risk of imminent bodily injury to the student and/or others.

Any staff member may physically restrain and/or seclude a student without advance notice to the building administrator when it is necessary for the protection of others or for self-defense, The Superintendent shall develop procedures for staff to follow in the implementation of this policy.
