

Christopher Torchia is a member of the graduating “Class of 1991.”

After graduating from Conemaugh Township, Chris attended Clarion University of Pennsylvania where he graduated with a Bachelor’s degree in Liberal Arts and General Studies. After his time in college, he moved to Washington, D.C. where he was hired by a defense contractor for whom he worked for ten years. When that time had passed, he landed a job with the Federal Government as a business manager for a submarine program.

Chris still resides in Washington, D.C. with his wife, Deepa, and his son, Sajan.

From his time at Conemaugh Township, Chris recalls a memory of his favorite teacher, Scott Cable, who was also his basketball coach.

He stated, “I really enjoyed Mr. Cable’s World Cultures class. He made the classroom fun to be in, but kept in mind learning was the number one priority.”

Torchia also stated, “His mentorship in basketball helped me in some of my successes today.”

Since then, the two have remained very close friends. Chris recalls one of his fondest memories from his time at Township was playing in a playoff basketball game at the University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown under his close friend and coach.
