11TH GRADE

PRE-COURSE READING

OVERVIEW AND RATIONALE

Welcome to AP English Language/Composition! By enrolling in this course, you have agreed to pursue college level challenges as a high school student, and because this course teaches you to read and write across many disciplines, you will experience a class unlike other English classes you have taken so far. After completing this pre-course reading, you will have expanded your reading repertoire, adding a nonfiction book from a well thought-out and discretionary recommendation list that offers recent publications. You also practice skills required in the course, creating a foundation for the rigorous coursework ahead. Make sure your parents approve your choices.

PURCHASE REQUIREMENT

- Purchase (you will read and refer to this frequently for class) The Elements of Style, 4th edition by Strunk and White. Barnes and Noble (store and online) and Amazon.com usually stock plenty until the school year begins.
- To ease your workload during the semester, you may want to read the whole book (it's tiny) prior to the course's first day. Then during the course when you receive the assignments for each portion, you can concentrate on just your annotations.

PURCHASE SUGGESTION

- You may want to purchase The MLA Handbook 8th edition, a reference manual that you will use in college as well. You can check one out for the semester, but if you buy your own copy, you can write in it rather than use stickies.

IMPORTANT: READ THIS BOX!

Both the paper and the project require documentation, meaning using both quotations and paraphrases with page numbers and an MLA correct Works Cited page. Regardless of reading strategy you employ, make sure you will be able to either return to the text for quotations or paraphrases or that you have selected passages and noted page numbers in advance. I am NOT grading your annotations; you annotate to help yourself later. You will NOT have to bring your pre-course reading books to class, but you must access them during your first month in class.

ANNOTATION BASICS

Annotating means underlining, commenting, questioning, bracketing, joining with arrows, and numbering. Annotating directly on the text page is fundamental before you can do anything with the selection/book. Obviously, you can only undertake direct annotation if you purchase the books. Otherwise, you must use sticky notes.

Research shows that it doesn't matter exactly what, how, or how much you annotate but that you annotate. The action of marking as you read increases your chances to read closely. Nonetheless, because you will use these books to fulfill specific tasks on the paper and project, the information below will help guide your annotating. Please understand: I am not grading your annotating. Annotation helps you prepare for more involved analysis, synthesis, and evaluation to come. If you choose not to annotate (a poor choice that shows that you may not actually want to pursue a college-level English course yet), you will struggle to determine necessary support when undertaking the project and paper.

ANNOTATE TO PREPARE FOR THE PROJECT AND PAPER

- ★ Recognize that texts often embody historical and cultural assumptions, values, and attitudes that differ from your own. Be aware of these differences. Because texts often challenge readers' attitudes, positions on current issues, and both consciously and unconsciously held beliefs, feelings such as anxiety, irritation, frustration, vulnerability, shame, wariness, and alertness indicate that you are reacting based on personal or family values, religious beliefs, racial or ethnic group, gender, sexual orientation, social class, or regional experience.
1. As you read,
 - identify places that offer you new information, claims, or evidence,
 - note how the author is using experience, knowledge, or connections to make a point or deliver information,
 - register your reactions: emotional, ethical (right/wrong), and logical (Does this make sense?).
 2. What did the author do to create that feeling/reaction? Mark the words, details, methods of phrasing, inclusion/exclusion of information that make you react and mark evidence: facts, statistics, personal accounts, others' accounts, expert statements/accounts, etc. that the author uses to prove his/her point.
 3. Once you have finished the book, end with a final analysis AND personal reflection of the book's entirety. 1) How did the author's writing connect you to the topic? 2) What does the author do that helps you understand what he/she wants you to do or think now that you have finished the book?
